Sun 'unli' to get better, reach even more subscribers under PLDT - Gokongwei

Sun Cellular's 'unli' services will get better and reach more people, particularly those with limited budgets, under PLDT which has a bigger network that uses fiber optics for better connectivity.

Lance Gokongwei, Digitel director and President of JG Summit, yesterday said in a statement before a Senate hearing on PLDT's acquisition of Digitel that the deal would definitely benefit the public and as such conforms with its franchise terms which are founded on public service.

With PLDT's reach, fiber optic backbone, and stable network quality, Sun's 'unli' would grow and deliver better service, he said.

"This is the greatest benefit of this transaction, and consumer satisfaction from a bigger and quality network is really what our franchises are for," he added.

Digitel and Sun Cellular pioneered on making telecommunications services affordable to the most number of people and this business model was so successful it forced both Smart and Globe to offer their own 'unli' versions not just for voice but for internet as well, he said.

PLDT, he said, recognized the value of Sun and its 'unli' moving forward, and decided to buy Digitel. Together, these two companies can further improve Sun's 'unli' services and there are no bigger beneficiaries but the public.
